PROTEST AGAINST CONTRACT

BERLIN A REAL SEAPORT

German Aviator May Lose $25,000
Prize for the Longest Flight
In One Day.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—More than 21,000 German physicians from small town and country districts have decided to follow the example of their professional brethren in Great Britain and declare a "doctor's strike" against sickness and accident insurance associations established under the imperial insurance laws. They complain against certain regulations under the laws, which they say militate against the patient who is a member of an organization of any kind in the choice of the physician by whom he desires to be treated. They object, too, to the wide discretion given to the organizations in the matter of contract with physicians.

The decision to declare a strike against these regulations was reached at a meeting in Berlin of more than 500 delegates from all over Germany. More than two-thirds of all the Germans are members of insurance organizations, which have their own contract physicians and the remaining medical field is over-crowded. The number of medical students in Germany has risen from 6,300 in 1905 to 14,000, an increase utterly disproportionate to the increase of population. The result is, according to statistics, that half of all the physicians have incomes less than $1,500 yearly.

The doctors of Berlin, Dresden, Hamburg and other large cities did not join in the movement, owing to was said, to the desperate competition among them.

Berlin is not usually looked upon as an important "seaport," for almost as much water passes daily through its water mains as through the little river Spree on which it is situated. The navigation interests of the German capital are so important, however, that after opening a large new harbor on the eastern side of the city only a few weeks ago at a cost of about $8,000,000, the municipality has just decided to build another one on the western side which will cost almost as much. It will cover, including warehouses and grounds used for harbor purposes, seventy-five acres. This step is taken in anticipation of a very large increase in canal and river shipping after the opening of the new canal at Stettin, now nearing completion.

In view of its improved shipping facilities and enlarged waterways Berlin looks forward to a more rapid development of its manufacturing and commercial interests.

Victor Stoeffler, the aviator, who by setting up a new world's record of 1,276 miles for a day's flight, proved that Germany may be considered a worthy rival of France in aviatorial accomplishment, may lose the $25,000 prize which it was supposed he had won by the feat. This was offered by the committee in charge of the National Aviation subscription fund for a record in excess of the hurricane flight of Brindejone des Moulins from Paris to Warsaw. Objection has been raised to the committee, on the ground that Stoeffler's flight was not made all in one direction like Brindejone's, but that the last 435 miles was made by flying back and forth between Darmstadt and Muelhausen in Alsace. The aviators point out that the general conditions of the contest as adopted and published by the committee only require that 335 miles be covered by continuous flight in a given direction, whereas Stoeffler's flight from Posen to Muelhausen alone covered 450 miles. They are already in arms against the committee for risking the lives of competitors by appointing the long distance competition for the month of October with its foggy nights and short days.

A decision has not been announced but aviators fear that the committee will not allow Stoeffler the grand prize, $25,000, for a flight surpassing Brindejone's, but will award him only $15,000, the prize for the longest flight under the regular conditions.

The "Princely Schaumburg-Lippe Sailing Fleet" has been disbanded. In spite of its high sounding title, this navy consisted only of small sailing boats which plied the inland lake called Steinhuder Meer. It was, however, an historical curiosity.

The Princess of Schaumburg-Lippe have for nearly 150 years owned a little water fortress on an artificial island in the lake and maintained a sailing fleet, at first to provide communications with this castle of refuge in case of an attack but later for the more prosaic use of excursions. The eighteen seamen who manned the vessels were officials of the little state and wore its queer, antiquated uniform. The reigning prince finally decided that his navy was an expensive luxury and sold it to private persons. A restaurant on the island also belonging to the Prince and kept up by a retired official from the little court of Bückeburg, went under the hammer as well.

Lippe-Deimold is just having a new issue of money. The royal mint in Berlin has struck off an issue of thalers (three mark pieces worth about 75 cents) bearing a new likeness of Prince Leopold IV. The coins will not be placed in general circulation, but collectors and others desiring them must apply to the princely treasuries or princely savings banks.

The high cost of living and related problems are attacked in a series of home economics lectures at the Teachers' Training College in Baltimore. The following are a few of the practical topics considered: What is the food requirement for one day for a young woman 17 to 20 years of age? A study of actual lunches that can be prepared for 2 cents and 5 cents. The value of pure food. How does the sanitation of the school affect the health and efficiency of the child? How can we as consumers influence economic and sanitary conditions by careful buying?

Funerals at a Reasonable Price

No person wishes to let the mind dwell on the subject of death, we all shudder to think of the time, when an undertaker will be called into our home—but we all know that the Grim Reaper, who spares none, will bring this event about.

I realize the public aversion to the subject of death will make some misunderstand, and maybe, resent this announcement.

On the other hand, this inclination to think as little as possible about death has resulted, in many cases, in an excessive increase in the price charged for the care of loved ones. The slogan, "Nothing Too Good For The Dead", has been abused in many ways, the world over, and the living have been made to suffer privation through their love for the departed.

BECAUSE, I believe that such conditions should not exist, I am taking this method, (which maybe new here but is now established in all the eastern cities), of placing my business and prices before serious minded people, in an intelligent manner.

I have arranged to afford the people of Tulsa the same burial advantages at the PRICES which now prevail in the larger cities of the east.

As an example, I will hereafter supply a beautiful black broad cloth casket, embalm and care for the body in every way—and furnish hearse—all for the sum of $60.

It can be safely said that such has never before been offered in Tulsa at less than $100, maybe more. It is but an example of prices and services I will render.

I have one of the finest equipped undertaking establishments in the state. I am a graduate of one of the oldest and best Colleges of Embalming in the United States and have but recently completed a Post Graduate course. I have successfully practiced my profession in Chicago and other eastern cities, and am in a position to render the very highest service my profession affords.

Declare Their Rights.

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 15.—Action believed by New Orleans bankers inimical to financial interests of the state was taken by the Louisiana constitutional convention today when it voted that the convention had a right to take up any question relating to changes in the constitution. The convention was called to provide means for paying the bonded debt and to partially reorganize the New Orleans sewerage and water board.

Fifteen bank presidents of New Orleans today signed a telegram sent to the chairman of the convention and Governor Hall protesting against such action. They said the bonded debt proposition should be disposed of at once as the state had to pay of at once as the state had to pay of $11,000,000 January 1. Although the committee on the bonded debt has a proposition practically ready to report, it was not sent to the convention today. The session was taken up with the sewerage and water board matter.

Opinions Greatly Vary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Wide divergence of opinion as to the merits of the Lever bill for agricultural extension work in all the states developed at today's session of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations.

Dean Davenport of the Illinois state agricultural college, declared that unscrupulous politicians would be able to use such a law to create the greatest political machine ever devised, while Dr. B. T. Galloway, assistant secretary of agriculture, expressed the opinion that the bill afforded the proper solution for the present diffi-
